John J. Prendergast, Ph.D., is an adjunct assistant professor of psychology at the California Institute of Integral Studies. He is senior editor (with P. Fenner and S. Krystal) of The Sacred Mirror: Nondual Wisdom and Psychotherapy.

G. Kenneth Bradford, Ph.D., is a licensed psychologist in private practice and an adjunct professor at John F. Kennedy University and the California Institute of Integral Studies.

"This exceptional anthology reflects the deepening confluence between timeless spiritual wisdom and Western psychological understanding. Bringing the spiritual insights of Zen, Tibetan Dzogchen, and Advaita Vedanta to bear on the practice of psychotherapy, the authors demonstrate how genuine nondual spiritual realization naturally applies itself in the therapeutic encounter. Most impressive is the fact that these are not religious scholars, but dedicated realizers and teachers whose work with students and clients is both healing and enlightening."

—Stephan Bodian, MFT, psychotherapist, dharma teacher, and author of Meditation for Dummies and coauthor of Buddhism for Dummies

"This is one of the best transpersonal guides to being of which I am aware. Both professionals and clients will benefit from this volume's acute evocation of mystery—and its startling power to heal."

—Kirk Schneider, PhD, editor of the Journal of Humanistic Psychology, author of The Handbook of Humanistic Psychology, and The Rediscovery of Awe

"Reading these pages is like witnessing the birth of a new, quintessentially American, wisdom tradition. The work of these authors may indeed represent a brilliant evolution of the entire field of mental health in America."

—Anna Douglas, Ph.D., a founding teacher of Spirit Rock Meditation Center

"This is a 'where the rubber meets the road' exploration of the interface of psychotherapy with Zen, Advaita Vedanta and Dzogchen and other nondual approaches. This book serves as an excellent resource for therapists interested in bringing more spiritual awareness into their clinical practice."

—David Lukoff, Ph.D., Professor of Psychology, Institute of Transpersonal Psychology, Co-president of the Association of Transpersonal Psychology

"This book is at the same time a delight and strong medicine: a multifaceted exploration of the relative and the absolute in the context of the therapy room, in language that manages to clarify rather than obscure this most subtle of subjects."

—Roger Housden, author of the Ten Poems series: Seven Sins for a Life Worth Living, and editor of Dancing with Joy: 99 Poems
